Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because:

Applicant's argument is not persuasive. Specifically, applicant argues that Molev-Shteiman does not teach +1,-1 modulation of a synchronization signal and that claim 2 should therefore be allowed. However, this argument is not persuasive for two reasons.

Specifically, Fukasawa teaches, among other things, generating a coded synchronization signal (e.g., see Fukasawa at col. 2, lines 40-55). Molev-Shteiman teaches taking a signal and modulating it by using alternating multiplication by +1 and -1 (e.g., see Molev-Shteiman at col. 3, lines 41-51 regarding "the process referred to above as 'modulation' mapped to +1's ... [and] mapped to -1's"). Thus, Fukasawa in view of Molev-Shteiman teach these claim limitations.

Still further, while not relied upon for the rejection of claim 2, it should be noted that applicant admits that +1,-1 modulation is well known in the art (page 3 of Response, filed May 8, 2006). Additionally, even though applicant then argues that +1,-1 modulation is only well known with respect to modulating a carrier signal and not modulating a code sequence, Examiner considers that even if direct teachings were absent in the cited prior art (which Examiner maintains is not the case) it would have also been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to use a well known modulation technique (i.e., +1,-1 modulation) in the device taught by Fukasawa in order to provide modulation for transmitting the coded synchronization signal of Fukasawa.

Accordingly, applicant's argument is not persuasive.
